MRS. O. J. HANSON, BELOVED AND RESPECTED PIONEER MATRON DEAD

The people of this section of the Hi-Line were grieved at the word Saturday that Mrs. O. J. Hanson, respected and loved pioneer matron had answered the call of her Maker, and passed quietly on. The end was not unexpected as Mrs. Hanson had been ill for many months, having suffered a stroke over a year ago, from which she had never rallied. She bore her physical suffering patiently and meekly; just as she had lived her everyday life—sweetly sparing others and not thinking of herself. Her childrens' great adoration of her told painer than words, what a wonderful mother she truly was. And while she has gone on, the beautiful memory she has left to her family and friends will ever be a blessing and an inspiration to higher and better things.

All who knew her loved and respected her. The sympathy of every one in the community goes out in full measure to the bereaved family.

Rushia Ann Hanson was born February 17th, 1870 at Pipin Wisconsin, died Saturd, May 9th, 1936, at her home in Joplin, Montana after a long illness. On December 18th, 1889 she married O. J. Hason in Minneapolis, Minnesota. They resided for several years in Herman, Minnesota, moving then to Sherwood, North Dakota. They came to Montana in 1888, settling first at Chester, later moving to Joplin, where she resided until her death. She is survived by her husband, O. J. Hanson one sister, Mrs. Sadie Brower of Seattle, Washington, six children, George R. Hanson, of Fresno, California, Richard E. Hanson, Mrs. George L. Brennan of Joplin, Mrs. Lester Vincent of Inverness, and Mrs. Elmer Stewart and Eleanor Ryerson of Great Falls.

She was a member of the Inverness Methodist Congregation, a member of the Lutheran Ladies Aid of Joplin, and a member of the Royal Neighbors of America at Whitefish.

Funeral services were held in Havre by the Rev. John Stewart at the Holland and Bonine Funeral Home, Tuesday, May 12th. Many friends of the Joplin, Inverness and Rudyard communities attended the service. The floral offerings were many and very beautiful Hymns were sung by Miss Donna Watts and Miss Pearl Ann Steffer.

PASSED away Jane Rea McTaggart Jewell

Death knocked at another Chester home this week and Mrs. Chas. Jewell answered the call and went to her eternal rest. Calmly she slipped away at 1:10 Saturday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Della Marshall.

For more than a year she has been failing and for some time has been bed-ridden. Wednesday evening a sudden change was noted and she seemed to fail steadily from then on.

She was the daughter of James and Jane McTaggart and was born in Quebec in 1859. While she was yet a small child her parents came to the states and settled at Brooks, Maine. Here her girlhood days were spent. On the 26th of March 1881 she was married to Chas. S. Jewell at Lawrence, Mass. Five children blessed this union, one lad dying in infancy.

Soon the call of the West surged in the soul of her family and they came westward to South Dakota, settling near the South Dakota line and later moving near Chamberlain. Here for thirty years and more she answered the call of pioneering and earned for herself in good deeds a true and eternal resting place.

She was member of the Baptist church and an earnest work in all religious work.

She leaves to mourn her death her husband, Chas. Jewell of this town, two daughters, Mrs. O. J. Wegan, and Mrs. Della Marshall, also of Chester, one son and one daughter in Vermont, and one brother at Portland, Maine.

In 1913 she went to Vermont and spent her years there until 1923 when once again she came westward and settled at Tiber, Montana. And here she remained to the last.

She was a friend of all those that knew her, she had an ever-ready smile a symbol of her own shining personality, and it shone on her face to the last hours of her life.

HENRY YOCTOROWIC IS KILLED IN AUTO CRASH

Monday's Associated Press dispatches carried the news of an auto smash near Missoula Sunday night in which Henry Yoctorowic, formerly of north of Joplin and later of Havre, was so badly injured that he died in a Missoula hospital.

He was working between a trailer and his truck when it was struck by a car driven by Dr. George Finlay Simmons of Montana State university.

Dr. Simmons narrowly escaped injury and Mrs. Simmons and Lowell Wadmond of New York, were slightly injured in the crash.

Dr. Simmons said that light from an approaching car blotted out the trailer, hooked behind a truck, which was stopped on the highway. Officers said the trailer and truck were unlighted and that Yoctorowic was standing between the trailer and the truck, fixing wires, when the impact occurred.

Yoctorowic, who was traveling from Havre to take up residence at The Dalles, Ore., suffered a broken pelvis and other internal and external injuries. It is said that his wife had preceded him by train to the Oregon city.

Following an inquest held Tuesday, the body was sent on to the Dalles, Ore., for interment.
